SUNDAY SEPTEMBER 3, 2017

OPENING SONG: Brother Ken Thompson # 485 Sweet Hour of Prayer

OPENING PRAYER: Carl Boyd or Visiting Brethren

COMMUNION SONG: Bro Thompson # 159 I Gave My Life For Thee

CONTRIBUTION SONG: Brother Thompson # 466 Send The Light

PRESERMON SONG: Bro Thompson # 423 Jesus Is Coming Soon

Bro. Kelly: The Blackest Land & The Whitest People Acts 10:1-11:18

Racial Bigotry: The white verses Black race problems since the founding of our country can be compared to the same problem of the Judaizing Jews and the Gentiles in the primitive Church. This chapter is concerned with the conversion of the Gentile Cornelius, the same event also being justified by Peter and 6 witnesses to the Jerusalem Church in Acts 11. Luke's devoting so much space to the narrative of a single conversion indicates the importance of it. It was in this conversion of this Roman centurion that the issue of receiving Gentiles into Christ began to be decided. This is much like the 1964 Civil Rights Act. Yes, other Gentiles had been saved prior to this; but it was upon the basis of their having first been circumcised and converted as full proselytes to Judaism. The earliest Christians most of whom were Jewish were willing to welcome Gentiles into the faith as Proselytes first and Christians later. Cornelius' baptism was the beginning of the end of that, despite the fact of the "Judaizers" continuing to advocate their old view afterward, as seen through Acts 15 and in the Pauline epistles. The final results: Notice the three verbs in Acts 11:18. First: "they held their peace." The first indicates the criticism was stifled. Second: they "glorified God." The second says for that even for a believing Jew for a Gentile to be of equal value to God was astounding. Third: that God "granted repentance..." The third is of special note by its structure (aorist tense verb) Luke points out that these believing Jews were reluctant to adopt such acceptance of the Gentiles as a policy for the future ... The verb indicates that they thought this was probably a onetime deal ... But for this once they conceded that God worked a moral miracle ... But they were not committing themselves to any permanent principle.
