Isaiah 35 Prophecy of Healing Miracles of Christ

Flourishing state of Church consequent to awful judgments predicted in preceding chapter. Images employed in description are so very consolatory and sublime as to oblige us to extend fulfillment to period of Gospel dispensation when Messiah shall take unto himself his great power and reign. Fifth and sixth verses literally accomplished by our Savior and His apostles: but that miracles wrought in first century were not only import of language used by prophet, is sufficiently plain from context. They, therefore, have a farther application; and are contemporary with, or rather a consequence of, judgments of God upon enemies of Church in latter days; and so relate to greater influence and extension of Christian faith, conversion of Jews, restoration to their own land, and second advent of Christ. Much of imagery of this chapter seems to have been borrowed from exodus from Egypt: but it is greatly enlivened by life, sentiments, and passions ascribed to inanimate objects; all nature being represented as rejoicing with people of God in consequence of their deliverance; and administering in such an unusual manner to their relief and comfort, as to induce some commentators to extend meaning of prophecy to blessedness of saints in heaven, Isaiah 35:1-10.
